Magill's Medical Guide

Citation is American Medical Association format

The screenshot shows a Microsoft Internet Explorer browser window displaying the Salem Health website. The address bar shows the URL: <http://health.salempress.com/action/doSearch?type=simple&target=bc...simple&restrict=all&filter=concept&all=epilepsy&occurrences=full&publication=40000053>. The page title is "SALEM HEALTH" and the family name is "Southeastern Technical College".

The search interface includes a search bar with "epilepsy" entered, and dropdown menus for "In: Full Text" and "From: Magill's Medical Guide". There are buttons for "Search Now", "Clear All", and "Advanced Search".

The "Results" section shows "Results 1-20 of 41 for 'Full Text: epilepsy'". The results are categorized by gender: All (41), Men (0), Women (1), Elderly (0), and Children (7). The first result is "Epilepsy" (checked), described as a serious neurologic disease characterized by seizures, which may involve convulsions and loss of consciousness. It is authored by Sanford S. Singer, Ph.D.; updated by W. Michael Zawada, Ph.D. (MMG - 3,314 words). Other results include "Auras", "Seizures", "Electroencephalography (EEG)", and "Brain disorders".

Under the "Saving to Profile" section, there are three buttons: "Save Checked Articles", "Save Citations of Checked Articles" (circled in red), and "Email Citations of Checked Articles". A red arrow points from the top of the page down to the "Save Citations of Checked Articles" button. Below the buttons, there is a note: "You can save the parameters of this search so you can re-run it at a later time."
